DEFINING WORKPLACE CULTURE

Defining Workplace Culture

There are various definitions of workplace culture. The one we choose to use is:

Workplace culture is the shared values and beliefs within a workplace. Culture impacts people's attitudes, behaviours, and ways of thinking. [1]

You can think about workplace culture as an organization's values in action. Cultural norms signal what is encouraged vs. discouraged and accepted vs. rejected within a work environment.

“When properly aligned with personal values, drives, and needs, culture can unleash tremendous amounts of energy toward a shared purpose and foster an organization's capacity to thrive.” [2]

Pop Up: Employers highlight that employees with disabilities enhance workplace culture and contribute to improved workplace morale. [3]

WHAT IS AN INCLUSIVE WORKPLACE?

What is an Inclusive Workplace?

An inclusive workplace is a working environment where every employee feels safe and comfortable being themselves at work.

We are all unique – with different backgrounds and life experiences. Based on the identities a worker holds, different systems of oppression and discrimination can overlap to negatively impact them the workplace.

The culture of a workplace is crucial to making employees feel at home, staying in the same company, and investing in its future. I know this, because where I work now, I feel accepted and welcomed as a hijab-wearing single-mother of a young child, who also needs a guide-dog at work, prays during break times and requires accessible software applications on my computer.

I know what you mean. At first, this may sound like a long list of special adjustments on the part of the company, but once you set them up, it is so easy to offer these to everyone in the company. In the end, it makes everyone's lives a lot easier

THE WORKPLACE CULTURE OF A DISABILITY CONFIDENT ORGANIZATION

The Workplace Culture of a Disability Confident Organization

How do workers with disabilities feel in an inclusive workplace culture?

Accepted: A sense of belonging within a team, with coworkers, and across the wider organization, and nobody gets left behind.

What steps do disability confident organizations take to achieve this?

- Staff are welcoming and inclusive of colleagues with disabilities.
- The workplace is fully accessible, with accommodations available for all employees.
- People of all backgrounds are encouraged to participate equally.
- Team environments foster inclusion, with no one feeling excluded or discriminated against.
- Managers are trained in conflict resolution.
- Mentorship opportunities are available to everyone, including persons with disabilities.
- Leaders personally welcome new employees on their first day.
